Why inlingua?

inlingua Malta has been providing quality language training to people from all over the world since 1980. We are part of inlingua International, the largest association of privately-owned language schools in the world currently having 345 language centres in 44 different countries.

We have created our own style of teaching, and supplement this with language learning resources developed at our academic department in Switzerland. This combination of inlingua books and innovative teaching techniques is known as 'the inlingua method'. We are confident that our approach works because we have over 40 years experience in providing successful and effective language training to thousands of students worldwide.

we do things differently

The inlingua approach

- Lessons conducted in target language only
- Opportunity to speak as much as possible during the lesson
- Lessons conducted orally with the book closed
- Concentration on teaching structures more than on teaching individual words
- Theoretical explanations kept to a minimum - rules learnt from examples
- Teachers adapt their approach to the individual requirements of the student
- Combination of a structural and functional approach to language learning
